The Devonshire Arms Hotel and Spa at Bolton Abbey combines panoramic beauty with style and traditional elegance. This landmark venue offers pretty English gardens, full of abundant plants and flowers, as well as an Italianate-style knot garden. The venue itself is a handsome Georgian property crafted from Yorkshire stone. Once a coaching inn owned by several dukes of Devonshire, it's been sympathetically extended. Inside, it has a homely yet classic feel, with fine art, period features and contemporary design.

Ceremonies take place in a range of locations for 12 to 90 guests, from the oak-panelled Cavendish Room, which holds 90 friends and family, to the cosy and atmospheric Clifford Room, holding 30 people. Receptions are held for up to 130 loved ones.

Couples are offered a free menu tasting, bridal suite and midweek first-anniversary stay. They can also enjoy a 25 per cent discount on spa treatments and afternoon tea the day before their wedding.

Set against a backdrop of Guisborough Forest and the Cleveland Hills, this English country house provides a magical setting year-round. Blossom trees create natural confetti in spring, roses are in full bloom come summer, red ivy climbs the walls in autumn, and cosy log fires are lit during winter. The rose gardens and terrace provide gorgeous al fresco spaces for a drinks reception, while the rose arch and listed beech tree provide picture-perfect spots.

Inside, the four-star hotel combines modern-day luxury with traditional features. Ceremonies and receptions are held in three areas. The Madoc Suite hosts up to 220 attendees; with its sweeping staircase and twinkling chandeliers it's full of ballroom elegance. The Conservatory overlooks the grounds and Cleveland Hills and creates the feeling of bringing the outside in. The Longhull Room is a more intimate space for up to 36 invitees to enjoy its picturesque views, stunning portraits and feature fireplace.

The happy couple will be treated to a four-poster bedroom for their first night as newlyweds.
